Dunn, Karen K.

DAVID SORENSEN'S FAMILY STORIES

David Sorensen
April 10, 1995

7th English

Dunn, Karen K. 28 June 1948. Orangeville, Ut.
Personal Interview. Orangeville, Ut. 8 April 1995.

This is the one day in our lives that we will always look back on the day we first sell rabbit drippings to kids that are unsuspecting to the foul trick. The story starts in 1954 in Denmark my mom was 6 years old and was a little stinker.

"Mom can I go out to play with Lars?" "Yes, dear but be back in time for diner." They went to the school yard and played for a while and then she said it "Let's go in to the forest and gather rabbit po and sell it to the little kids in the school yard." "Ok" Lars said. So they went into the forest and did what they set out to do.

When they got enough rabbit turds they went back to the school yard and sold them to the kids in the school yard. They sold it to one kid and he bit in and swallowed then he started to caught and then he through up. The rest of the kids said they weren't going to eat any thing that they were selling again.

That night when my mom got home she was scolded and punished she could not go out and play with Lars for the rest of the week so she found something else to obtain her interests so she spit on her sister through the drain pipe from the balcony. But she hit her father instead. He got so mad he grounded her for another week.