Where my grandma lived they had the bathroom in the back of the house. When you had to use the bathroom you would have to run across a little field to get there.

When my grandma was growing up they had a big tom turkey that they kept in the back yard. They had it for a pet. Only it was too mean to do anything with it.

One day my grandma was sick, and had to go to the bathroom a lot. When she would get outside to go to the bathroom, the turkey would be there to make sure she didn't go anywhere.

My grandma tried to go again, but the turkey chased her back into the house. She went and told her mom, and her mom had to get a broom and chase the turkey away so she could make it to the bathroom.

When she got to the bathroom her mom would wait and when she was done she would chase it off again so grandma could make it back. They had to do this every time she went to the bathroom.

It was in the afternoon, and grandma's dad came home from work. Her mom was fixing supper, so her dad had to take over the job of chasing the turkey.

When grandma went to the bathroom, her dad would pound that turkey right and left. He thought that he had done the job. Next time someone went to the bathroom the turkey wouldn't bother them.

It happens that her dad had to use the bathroom. He went outside without the broom thinking that he had taught that turkey a lesson. He stepped off the porch and the turkey chased him all the way around the yard until he went in the house.

He finally had to use the broom again.
